The prior art fails to teach or fairly suggest a computer-readable medium of instructions for searching a codebook having a plurality of codewords for an optimum codeword for quantizing an input vector, the instructions comprising: a second set of instructions for designating, as search object codewords, codewords having element values existing between the lower boundary value and the upper boundary value among element values corresponding to the particular position in the respective codewords constituting the codebook; and a third set of instructions for determining optimum codewords having a minimum quantization error value through full search for calculating a quantization error value with the input vector for the search object codewords as called for in claims 1 and 6. Therefore, claims 1-10 are presently allowed.
